Subject-Verb Agreement

Sentences are easier to understand when subjects and verbs match, meaning they grammatically agree with each other. This handout will cover subject-verb agreement and some of the special scenarios associated with agreement.

Subject-Verb Agreement

Subjects and verbs agree when they are the same in number. A singular subject must have a singular verb, and a plural subject must have a plural verb.

Incorrect: The cat want the milk. Corrected Verb: The cat wants the milk. Incorrect: The dog like to run. Corrected Subject: The dogs like to run.

Special Concerns

Intervening words: Sometimes words (such as modifiers, prepositional phrases, or clauses) separate the subject and verb. If we ignore those intervening words, we can determine if the subject and verb agree. Example: The woman who sold you the watches is back.

Subjects joined by and: When multiple singular subjects are joined by and, they are considered plural.
Example: The doctor and the nurse are very friendly.

Subjects joined by or and nor. When multiple subjects are joined by or or nor, the subject closest to the verb decides if the verb is plural or not.

Example: Neither the nurses nor the doctor knows what to do.

Indefinite pronouns: Pronouns such as everybody, nobody, or anyone are singular. Example: Nobody knows the extent of the damage.

There is and There are sentences: When sentences begin with these words, the verb reflects the number of whatever the there refers to.

Example: There are dogs.

Relative pronouns: When words such as who, which, or that are the subject of a clause, the verb agrees with the pronoun's antecedent (the subject that who, which, or that refers to).

Example: The car that was stolen belongs to her.

Words that can be singular or plural: Some words may be singular or plural, depending on usage.Correct: The deer is here. (The deer in this sentence is an individual animal.)Correct: The deer are in the forest. (Deer in this sentence refers to a group of animals.)

